MEET THE STAFF: MARTIN JANES

"As Managing Director, my role at RRC combines technical advice on river restoration implementation, representing practitioners and the wider restoration community at policy and strategy steering groups and managing the business side of a not-for-profit organisation. I work directly with our 'core funder' representatives from the Environment Agency, the Scottish Environmental Protection Agency, Natural England, Scottish Natural Heritage, Rivers Agency and the Northern Ireland Environment Agency to ensure that RRC is providing the expertise they need. We also look at what might be necessary or helpful, based on RRC's position as the focus for information on what is happening in the UK, and abroad.

Since the day he hatched, Martin has been interested in rivers © RRC (2011)

Over the past year I have been managing RRC's input to the initial stages of RESTORE. This is the first 'Information and Communication' strand of LIFE+ projects for rivers and it fits precisely with the aim of RRC to communicate best practice river restoration implementation, albeit at the European scale. Knowledge exchange events and opportunities for sharing good practice examples have already taken place in 11 of the 21 countries within the project's scope. Recently I presented RESTORE as a keynote at an international conference in Denmark on restoring river habitat, and themes were explored at a European river restoration networks meeting in Slovenia.

Through the ongoing suite of RESTORE events and exchanges of experiences, I know we can add a lot to the information resource available to river managers". Email Martin to get in touch.
